

Jeremy's Story

My greatest pleasure, what really means so much to me lies in looking inward, feeling from the soul-to feel and experience these feelings. It's about feelings unique to themselves, feelings that can't be put into words. To try and describe it, I guess you could say it's a 'dark' somewhat 'gothlike' feeling, but also feeling very lush, like a garden of abundance to be felt and experienced in so many different ways, where the 'dark' feeling is a positive thing, a beautiful thing. Lately, a dark violet purple color is something I've associated with it, with a raindrop shape, and perhaps a flower with rain. I love for it to feel like something unique to me, unique personal feelings from my unique experiences and interpretations of them. Emphasizing how each time I feel it it is unique, the 'only one of itself' is something I love about it.

I love the concept of a strong sense of self, something from you, focused on you that you only need yourself for, it is a powerful thing. I feel like a creator, in a way like an 'artist of feeling', each time creating something inspired from my soul, each feeling created similar, and also unique. You are the creator, the artist, and you can feel anything you want from your heart-by believing.

I like to feel a sense of 'utopia' around the feelings, like 'they are 100 percent what they are and only that, I could feel them all the time and never tire'. The utopia around it is about embracing it as 'perfectly' what it is, not an obsession with fixing its flaws.

It's about positive, kind and blissful emotions. I like the self focus and uniqueness as it allows everyone to be the 'best of themselves', enhancing the concept that in a way, everything is that-the best of itself. It's not about outdoing anyone, but embracing yourself-you are the only you. I would want to give support to those who feel similar things, for them to experience it in a lush abundance. I love the idea of a world where we can all find bliss.

Through these feelings I find that a weakness can be a strength, it's often a perspective thing. A weakness, a failure or struggle may inspire you to look to something else, you may 'give up' on something but find something amazing by doing so. I found the 'art of experiencing feelings', as a way to save myself from corrosive self doubt, and it found something that feels like it is right from my soul. So much of this is about perspective, and a good perspective and approach, believing can make so much different. It is often a struggle for me, to believe in myself and listen to the soul, but learning to feel it stronger and easier is all part of the experience.

There it is, what means the most to me. It may seem strange to have your passion to be feeling, but for me it's right from the soul, right to the core-a strong identity in me. If you want to know more, or if you feel something similar-I encourage you to reach out to me, I love to meet kindred spirits, hopefully who are just as consumed by it as I am.

Story courtesy of Jeremy Carpenter, a true Nina Rose Music fan.
Published in June 2018 on www.ninarosemusic.com